IV. Work plan

Scope of the project

Chronic skin inflammation, including conditions like atopic dermatitis (AD), burdens at least 250 million patients worldwide with a lifelong chronic, debilitating, and incurable disease. Current therapeutic drugs are effective but compromise the immune system. An ideal therapy should only be produced in situ at the required time and provide simpler and local administration. SKINDEV focuses on the creation of Smart Skin Microbial Devices by genetic engineering of naturally occurring skin bacteria, Cutibacterium acnes (CA), so they can sense the skin health status. The Bioenergetic group at Ciências will consolidate this ambition by contributing to the design and creation of robust and versatile chassis for SSMDs. This will be achieved by delivering insights into the bioenergetics and metabolism of CA. We plan to investigate CA bioenergetics, nutrient uptake, secreted metabolites (via metabolomics), and biomass composition in AD lesions compared to healthy skin. Understanding CA energy metabolism, which is still elusive, is fundamental not only to design and optimize production of therapeutic substances, but also to bring light into competitive/synergistic interactions within the skin microbiota and with the host.

Tasks

The work plan to be executed by the Investigator includes the following tasks:

- 1) Provide information for genome-scale network models of C. acnes metabolism by studying cell growth under several controlled conditions, aeration (aerobic vs anaerobic) and pH, in defined media supplemented with different carbon sources (e.g. glycerol, lactate or acetate).
- 2) Identification of C. acnes responses in strain-to-strain co-existence/competition/symbiosis conditions by co-strain growth and assess possible metabolic interactions with S. aureus;
- 3) Cell growths in skin models/skin mimicking media - The researcher will develop surveys of metabolomic profiles
- 4) Participation in dissemination activities, communication and involvement of project agents.

The work plan is included in the work-packages 2, 3, 4 and 5 of the project. The work plan must begin no later than February 2026.
